GAME PROGRESSION - The number of acid balls in a given Attack is equal to 15 plus the Attack number. Attacks are divided into waves with a maximum of 10 acid balls dropping in a given wave. The color of the explosions will change to indicate the number of waves in an Attack. Dark red is two (2) waves, light yellow is three (3) waves, magenta is four (4) waves, medium green is six (6) waves and cyan is seven (7) waves.

The acid ball's speed increases with each additional Attack. Acid ball re-targeting starts on the second Attack. These acid balls change course at any point in their descent. Watch for Hydrazine Meteors to start raining in Attack three (3).

END OF ATTACK - If both laser cannons run out of ammunition (or are blown up), the remaining acid balls speed up (after a two second delay) to finish the Attack quickly. Also, all Hydrazine Meteors are released rather than one-at-a-time. Extra military equipment is awarded between Attacks only, at 50,000, 100,000, and every 100,00 points thereafter.

Both laser cannon are rebuilt and restocked at the beginning of each Attack. In Options 1 and 2, each cannon is stocked with 15 charges. In Option 3, each player cannon is stocked with 20 charges. STARTEGY TIPS - Try for multiple acid ball bonus whenever you can. To ignite two acid balls with one explosion, the charge must be between two acid balls, otherwise a chain reaction occurs, which does not earn a bonus.

In an Advanced Attack the acid balls are dropping too fast to shoot each one individually. Set off your explosions below the lowest acid balls, so the chain reaction will destroy the higher acid balls. This will not provide a bonus, but it helps save your arsenal. During a Meteor shower, as in Attack 14, you must destroy the acid balls between each Meteor to keep from losing the objects at the Mission Control Center.

SCORING - 100 points are awarded for each acid ball hit. Bonus points are awarded when a single charge destroys multiple acid balls. A chain reaction will earn points for each acid ball destroyed, but no bonus is awarded.
