Page Pro Templates

Introduction

While compared to other programs Page Pro 99 is perhaps the simplest to use page-making program, it still doesn't endow the non-artist with artistic creativity and skills. While its many tools will help the artist create a beautiful page quickly and with a minimum of difficulty, those without the proper background and/or inclination can get pretty lost with a whole blank page to work with.

The Page Pro Template series is designed to remedy this situation by offering well-designed and creative pages for the average user. Now even if you can't draw a straight line if your life depended on it, you can create beautiful pages simply by customizing the ones in this series and printing them out.

At the same time, you'll be absorbing ideas of what constitutes a good page design. You'll learn how pictures complement a page, and by extension you'll be able to note when a page is "balanced" or crowded. When you get to this point you may want to try your hand at creating some of your own templates. Page Pro Templates will still be useful because all of the pictures, fonts and so forth included with each package can be easily used in your own pages.

Page Pro Templates, in sum, allow those just getting into the graphics arts to create high-quality works, teach the basics of what makes a page good, and when you are ready, provide a source of beautiful artwork for your own pages.

Using the Templates

The packages in the Page Pro Templates series require Page Pro 99 and at least one disk drive. Before using a template disk, make a copy of it and store the original.

A reference sheet is included with each package which shows the filenames of the pages, as well as lists the art files on the disk(s). Each page is actually a template - when you load the page its associated art files will load automatically if the Template disk is located in disk drive one. It is recommended that you turn pictures 'off' before loading in a page since the pictures on each template disk tend to be quite large. To load the art files by themselves, refer to the Page Pro 99 manual on loading files of that type.

Some template pages can be printed as is, while others should be customized (add names, an address and so forth). To customize a page simply move the cursor and type in the indicated areas. If you like, you can experiment in loading different large and small fonts, as well as adding your own borders with line fonts and loading in your own pictures.

You may want to save customized templates back to the original disk. Unless you add an appreciable amount of art work, you should be able to store them on your copy. Otherwise, you may have to delete unneeded files in order to make room for your added pictures and fonts.

If you have a multiple disk drive system, a RAM-disk or a hard-disk drive, you may want to set up the template page files so that they will load from that device instead of from DSK1. Remember that when Page Pro 99 loads a page it automatically loads any pictures and fonts associated with it - and if that artwork was originally on DSK1 (as with the Page Pro Templates series) the page "remembers" and looks to DSK1 for the art.

The Page Pro Rename Utility (included on the Bonus Disk), will allow you to change page files so that all references to DSK1 can be made into a reference to another disk drive number or a hard-disk sub-directory. You can also change the references if you are skilled with a disk sector editor.
